Eco Dying

Eco Dyeing - printing fabric and paper using locally collected leaves. Creating beautiful botanical prints.

You will be guided through the process of nature-based printing by demonstrating the mordanting and steaming involved of the fabric. The process is unpredictable and results in a subtle colour palette suggestive of alchemy and traditional fabric staining. You will experiment wrapping leaf collections into bundles, producing a series of samples.

CarolAnn is an artist and educator specialising in hand embroidery based in Yorkshire. She also teaches Eco Printing, Stitched Shibori, English Paper piecing and darning. She was second artist in the Stitched Together Project with the Military Wives run by Dionne Swift.

She has a BA (Hons) in Contemporary Surface Pattern and Textiles.

CarolAnn's own practice explores the importance of Slow textiles and traditional skills.

I am a working textile artist living in Ilkley. Having taught for many years I now run workshops and create my own textile art. I have been fortunate to travel including India, once with the Embroiderers Guild to the NW region to learn about the beautiful Rabari shisha work and then more recently to W. Bengal to study the Kantha work. I love the patterns and colours of the Indian textiles and look forward to sharing the textiles and my experiences with you. You can see some of my work at my website and on Instagram.

Indian Stitches

By looking at textiles from India we will design an envelope bag which encompasses shisha stitch and kantha work. Friday night we will examine textiles from India and do some drawing of motifs which we can use in our designs.

I will demonstrate how to do the Shisha mirror work and some of the stitches used in its decoration. This will form our central design. I will then show how to use kantha stitch to create detail of patterns or motifs for the surrounding area. The square design can then be turned into a small hanging or made into an envelope bag.
